I. INTRODUCTION

1. The Claimant has failed to prove both that he owned 1532382 Ontario Inc. (“Enterprise”) before the introduction of the Adams Mine Lake Act (“AMLA”) into the Ontario Legislature, and that he was an investor protected by the NAFTA. Accordingly, this Tribunal lacks jurisdiction, and this claim must be dismissed.
2. The Claimant has produced none of the contemporaneous documents that an investor would have: no emails, no correspondence, no facsimiles, no memoranda, no notes, no invoices or other documents that mention his ownership of the Enterprise, or even his involvement in the project. In fact, the only record that the Claimant ultimately relied on to corroborate his claim that he owned the Enterprise is a single handwritten line on a one-page “Shareholders Register” in an unreliable corporate Minute Book. The Claimant and his witnesses attempted to deify this document, calling it not only “REDACTED”¹ but “REDACTED.”² However, this assertion is legally baseless. Moreover, it ignores the overwhelming amount of evidence that suggests the Claimant was not the owner of the Enterprise prior to the introduction of the AMLA.
3. In particular, the Claimant did not act as the owner of the Enterprise. He did not hold himself out as the Enterprise’s owner to his friends and family, including his cousin, Mr. Saverio Montemarano, who helped purchase Adams Mine as a Limited Partner in 1532382 Limited Partnership (“Limited Partnership”). He was oblivious to the risks of owning Adams Mine. He never did the due diligence an owner would have done – he did not even review the Provisional Certificate of Approval to understand the conditions that needed to be fulfilled before a waste disposal site could be constructed at Adams Mine. He was also indifferent to the rewards that ownership of the Enterprise might bring, remaining uninformed even of the amount for which his alleged agent, Mr. Cortellucci, was attempting to sell the Site.
4. Further, the other individuals involved with the project, including Mario Cortellucci and the Limited Partners, did not treat the Claimant like he owned the Enterprise. No one sent the critical documents to the Claimant in Pennsylvania. No one sought or believed that his approval was needed for actions involving the Enterprise. No one involved him in important decisions concerning the Enterprise. No one indicated the Claimant's ownership on regulatory filings until months after the AMLA had been enacted.

5. In fact, Mr. Cortellucci and the Limited Partners acted as the owners of the Enterprise. Mr. Cortellucci organized, negotiated and assumed all the risks of purchasing Adams Mine. He then secured the involvement of his friends and family as other Limited Partners. The Limited Partners, through the Limited Partnership, then undertook the financial risks associated with the purchase of Adams Mine and the failure of the business. In particular, they REDACTED of the Adams Mine and the REDACTED REDACTED they made directly to the Enterprise. The Limited Partners also REDACTED and even signed an agreement in an effort to sell the Site. There is no reliable evidence that any of this was done in consultation with the Claimant.

6. Where an alleged owner has no reliable documentary evidence to prove that he is the owner, where he does not act like the owner, and where he is not treated like the owner, then, the Tribunal can reach only one conclusion: there is insufficient evidence to establish that he is, in fact, the owner.

II. THE CLAIMANT HAS THE BURDEN OF PROVING TO THIS TRIBUNAL THAT HE OWNED AN INVESTMENT PROTECTED BY THE NAFTA

7. The Claimant has brought this claim on behalf of the Enterprise under NAFTA Article 1117. Therefore, he has the burden of proving to this Tribunal that he owned an investment protected by NAFTA before the introduction of the AMLA.³ The failure to discharge this burden must result in the dismissal of his claim.

8. The Claimant has asserted that this Tribunal has no jurisdiction to decide issues of ownership with respect to Ontario business corporations. This assertion is meritless. The ownership of an investment is one of the fundamental issues investment tribunals – under the NAFTA or otherwise – are required to decide in accordance with international law and the principle of compétence de la compétence.

9. Even under domestic law, there is no requirement that a court in another Canadian jurisdiction stay its proceeding to wait for an Ontario court to decide the ownership of a corporation in a separate rectification procedure. The Claimant’s witness, Professor Welling was unable to identify domestic precedent to support his testimony.⁴ In fact, non-Ontario courts can and do address issues of the ownership of Ontario corporations to the extent such issues arise during the course of their proceedings.⁵ As the Tax Court of Canada stated, failure to do so would hoist the Court’s case load into a “judicial never-never land”.⁶

III. THE CLAIMANT MUST PRODUCE RELIABLE EVIDENCE TO PROVE THAT HE OWNED AN INVESTMENT PROTECTED BY THE NAFTA

10. NAFTA Article 1131(1) sets out the applicable law for arbitral tribunals under NAFTA Chapter 11. It provides that a tribunal “shall decide the issues in dispute in accordance with this Agreement and applicable rules of international law.” This language requires arbitral tribunals to apply international law to decide the issues before them, including issues with respect to burden of proof and the weight of particular evidence.⁷ Even Professor Welling admitted that he could not say whether his evidence concerning domestic law was relevant to this arbitration.⁸

⁶ Ibid., ¶ 30. [TAB-001, CAN-474]

⁷ Outside of the NAFTA context, arbitral tribunals have also adopted a similar approach. See e.g., Hussein Nuaman Soufraki v. The United Arab Emirates (ICSID Case No. ARB/02/7), Decision of the Ad Hoc Committee on the Application for Annulment of Mr. Soufraki (June 5, 2007), ¶ 105 (holding that an international tribunal “is not required to use the national law’s approaches to the burden of proof and rules of evidence.”) [BOA-152].

11. International arbitral tribunals have found that proving a particular fact requires reliable and contemporaneous documentary evidence.⁹ The uncorroborated assertions of witnesses are insufficient to establish jurisdiction.¹⁰ Moreover, arbitral tribunals have refused to hold any single document to be determinative of an issue without looking at all other relevant evidence. The Claimant offers no international law authority to the contrary because there is none. All of the relevant authority supports the position that the Claimant's evidence is insufficient.¹¹

12. For example, in Soufraki v. UAE, the tribunal determined that an Italian passport and certificates of nationality were not sufficient, in and of themselves, to establish that the claimant was Italian and entitled to the protection of the Italy-UAE bilateral investment treaty.¹² The tribunal found that, based on an evaluation of all the evidence on the record, it had no jurisdiction because the evidence taken in its entirety failed to prove Italian nationality.¹³

13. The evidence necessary to prove a fact is no different under Ontario law. In particular, the Ontario *Business Corporations Act*¹⁴ requires a court to look beyond the Shareholders Register and consider any evidence to the contrary.¹⁵ Professor Welling, at the hearing on jurisdiction, suggested for the first time that such evidence would have to

This provision, and other provisions like it in similar Canadian statutes, originated as an exception to rule against hearsay evidence. These provisions permitted a corporation to rely on corporate documents as evidence in a court without being introduced by a witness. See Dominion Trust Co. v. Royal Bank of Canada [1921] 1 W.W.R. 90 (B.C.S.C.) ¶ 14 [TAB-002, CAN-475]. This decision concerned the federal Companies Act R.S.C., 1906, ch. 79 s. 175; and *Page v. be documentary evidence because of the “REDACTED”¹⁶ However, Professor Welling was not able to provide any authority to support his suggestion.

14. In fact, the parol evidence rule is a misnomer as it is not a rule of evidence. Rather, it is a rule of the law of contracts pursuant to which “extrinsic evidence is inadmissible to modify a contract that has been reduced to writing.”¹⁷ Canadian courts have strictly limited its application to this context.¹⁸ In contrast, Canadian courts will generally consider both documentary evidence and witness testimony, and may also rely exclusively on oral evidence,¹⁹ to conclude that a corporate minute book – including a shareholders register – is inaccurate.²⁰

IV. THE CLAIMANT HAS FAILED TO PRODUCE RELIABLE EVIDENCE TO PROVE THAT HE OWNED THE ENTERPRISE AND WAS AN INVESTOR UNDER THE NAFTA PRIOR TO THE INTRODUCTION OF THE AMLA

15. In 2002, the Claimant was a 33-year-old government employee who had only recently become a Senior Policy Director in the Governor’s Policy Office.²¹ He was soon to be unemployed.²² He had never built or operated a waste management site and he had no experience in the waste management industry.²³

16. At this moment, if the Claimant's story is to be believed, he stumbled upon a "jackpot" – a business opportunity in which he would become the owner of a partially permitted waste disposal site at an abandoned mine in Northern Ontario allegedly worth tens of millions of dollars or more,²⁴ and which would not require him to put anything at risk or offer any sort of security.²⁵

17. This story is not credible, and ultimately, it is not supported by any reliable evidence. First, there are no reliable contemporaneous business documents to support it. Second, at no time did the Claimant behave like he was the owner of the Enterprise. Third, Mario Cortellucci and the Limited Partners acted as the owners of the Enterprise and Adams Mine.

A. There is No Reliable Contemporaneous Documentary Evidence that the Claimant Owned the Enterprise Prior to the Introduction of the AMLA

1. The Claimant Has None of the Documents that a Sole Shareholder Should Have

18. As explained in Canada's Counter-Memorial and its Submission on Jurisdiction, reliable contemporaneous business documents that reflect the Claimant as the sole shareholder of the Enterprise prior to the introduction of the AMLA should exist. There are none. In particular, there is no documentary evidence that the Claimant was involved in: the negotiations to purchase Adams Mine;²⁶ the organization and establishment of the

19. At the hearing, the Claimant had the opportunity to provide a reasonable explanation for his failure to introduce such documentary evidence. He did not do so. Instead, he confirmed that no documents evidencing his involvement prior to the introduction of the AMLA exist.

20. There are no emails, correspondence, facsimiles, memoranda, or notes among the Claimant and his alleged REDACTED, his alleged agent (Mr. Cortellucci), his alleged REDACTED, or the manager of the Site (Mr. McGuinty).³⁴ There are no emails, correspondence, legal bills, time dockets, legal memoranda, notes to file, or reporting letters prepared by REDACTED, that refer to the Claimant.³⁵ There are no contracts between the Claimant and any consultants who could have assisted in due diligence on the Site.³⁶ There are no bank records, invoices, bills, or cheques that

See Hearing Transcript, Day 1, page 187, line 1-7; page 225, line 2 to page 231 line 14 (Mr. Gallo). mention the Claimant.³⁷ Finally, there are no contemporaneous regulatory filings made prior to the introduction of the AMLA by the Claimant, the Enterprise or the Limited Partnership that mention the Claimant.³⁸

2. The Enterprise's Tax Returns Are Not Contemporaneous Evidence that the Claimant Owned the Enterprise Prior to the Introduction of the AMLA

21. Against this overwhelming lack of documentary evidence, the Claimant initially relied on the Enterprise's 2002 and 2003 tax returns to prove that he owned the Enterprise prior to the introduction of the AMLA. However, the Claimant has now conceded that they were not filed until October 2004, months after the AMLA was enacted. Moreover, the Enterprise's returns indicate that it was a Canadian Controlled Private Corporation ("CCPC") with REDACTED of its shares owned by Canadian residents.³⁹ Mr. Peri, who prepared the returns,⁴⁰ and Mr. Swanick, who certified them,⁴¹ have failed to provide a credible explanation reconciling this designation and certification with their allegation that the Claimant, a U.S. resident, was the Enterprise's sole shareholder.

22. With respect to the designation of the Enterprise as a CCPC, Mr. Peri asserted that he REDACTED

REDACTED This assertion was characterized by Canada's accounting expert, Mr. Truster, as REDACTED and by the Claimant's accounting expert, Mr. Kutner, as REDACTED⁴⁴ because REDACTED REDACTED REDACTED REDACTED⁴⁵ The only explanation that Mr. Kutner could offer was that the designation was accidental⁴⁶ but this was not Mr. Peri's explanation.⁴⁷

23. With respect to the representation that REDACTED of the Enterprise's shares were owned by Canadian residents, Mr. Peri's only explanation was that he did so out of habit.⁴⁸ Essentially, his explanation is that, even though he allegedly knew that the Claimant was a U.S. resident and the sole shareholder of the Enterprise, when he was preparing the provincial tax return, he manually typed REDACTED to describe the percentage of shares owned by Canadian residents instead of R⁴⁹. This explanation becomes even less credible considering that he made a similar designation indicating that the Enterprise had REDACTED on its federal tax returns.⁵⁰

⁵⁰ Truster Report, p. 4.

24. Mr. Swanick now concedes that he signed the Enterprise's federal and provincial tax returns.⁵¹ He has offered no explanation for the designation of the Enterprise as owned by Canadians except that he did not notice them before the returns were filed.⁵² Mr. Swanick,⁵³ and Mr. Kutner,⁵⁴ attempted to explain this lack of care on the grounds that nothing turned on the designation of the Enterprise as a CCPC. This is not accurate. As Mr. Truster explained, particularly with respect to initial returns, care is taken even with nil returns to ensure that mistakes are not replicated by the tax preparation software in later returns where the mistakes could be meaningful in the computation of the corporation's tax liability.⁵⁵ In this case, to the extent that profits from the sale or operation of Adams Mine remained with the Enterprise, or if compensation pursuant to the AMLA was paid to the Enterprise,⁵⁶ the Enterprise would have been able to claim a lower rate of taxation through the small business deduction given to a CCPC.⁵⁷

3. The Minute Book and the Shareholders Register Are Not Reliable and Contemporaneous Evidence that the Claimant Owned the Enterprise Prior to the Introduction of the AMLA

25. The Claimant also relied on the Minute Book, and in particular, the Shareholders Register as evidence that he owned the Enterprise before the introduction of the AMLA. However, the Minute Book was prepared and maintained by Mr. Swanick who admitted that the Shareholders Register would not necessarily reflect other agreements regarding ownership that were not disclosed to him.⁵⁸

26. Moreover, Mr. Swanick kept the Minute Book in his offices.⁵⁹ At no time prior to Canada's request in this arbitration had any of these documents relating to ownership been reviewed by any third party.⁶⁰ These documents were never filed with any regulatory authority and the information contained therein has never been verified or certified by any independent person. Accordingly, neither the Minute Book nor the Shareholders Register is sufficient proof of the Claimant's ownership of the Enterprise prior to the introduction of the AMLA.

27. Finally, as shown below, the testimony both from the fact witnesses and the forensic experts at the hearing established that the Minute Book is inherently unreliable evidence that should be given little weight in this arbitration. The Claimant's witnesses did not offer credible evidence as to when the documents in the Minute Book referring to the Claimant were prepared and executed. Further, both the testimony of the Minute Book manufacturer and the evidence of the forensic experts suggests that documents from the Minute Book have been removed and replaced.

a) The Witnesses Did Not Recall the Date the Minute Book was Prepared

28. The only documents in the Minute Book which the Claimant and his witnesses could date with any certainty were the Shareholder's Resolutions, which are the only documents in the entire record signed by the Claimant, and the Director's Resolutions. While these Resolutions were dated as if they were signed in the relevant year from 2003 through to 2008, the Claimant admitted that they were created in 2008 for the purposes of this arbitration.⁶¹

29. With respect to the preparation of the other documents in the Minute Book, the Claimant provided evidence from Mr. Swanick⁶² and Ms. Viggers.⁶³ Neither of these witnesses is independent or disinterested.⁶⁴ Nor could either recall exactly when these other documents were prepared or signed.⁶⁵ Ms. Viggers also admitted that she never met or even spoken to the Claimant.⁶⁶ Mr. Swanick and Ms. Viggers also failed to provide consistent or credible evidence concerning their practice of preparing corporate documents.

30. Mr. Swanick initially relied on what he claimed was his practice to assert that each of the relevant documents in the Minute Book was prepared and signed within 60 days after the date indicated thereon—either June 26, 2002 or September 9, 2002.⁶⁷ Then, after forensic examination showed that this could not be true,⁶⁸ the Claimant obtained a witness statement from Ms. Viggers, Mr. Swanick’s former assistant. In that witness statement, she claimed that her practice was to organize a minute book after she sent a

The Claimant’s admission reveals that Mr. Swanick’s testimony that he asked the Claimant to sign the Shareholder’s Resolutions in 2008 simply to bring the Minute Book up to date, and not for the purposes of this arbitration was not credible. “Form 1” to the Ontario Ministry of Consumer and Corporate Affairs.⁶⁹ According to Ms. Viggers’ witness statement, this meant that all of the documents in the Enterprise’s Minute Book were signed at some point after mid-September and before mid-October 2002.⁷⁰

31. At the hearing, Mr. Swanick changed his evidence concerning his practice so that it was consistent with the witness statement of Ms. Viggers.⁷¹ However, Ms. Viggers changed her evidence at the hearing, testifying instead that she actually organized the Minute Book a [REDACTED] after the incorporation of the Enterprise on June 26, 2002,⁷² and that the share certificates were probably completed and signed on the [REDACTED] [REDACTED] on their face.⁷³ This evidence is difficult to reconcile with the fact that she received instructions to change the date on the Claimant’s share certificate from September 2 to September 9, 2002.⁷⁴

32. Ultimately, Ms. Viggers admitted that she had no precise recollection of when she made the relevant entries in the Minute Book.⁷⁵ Her belief that the Minute Book was organized a month after the date of incorporation was based on her [REDACTED].⁷⁶ She explained that her practice did not include the [REDACTED] documents,⁷⁷ which she had earlier described as altering a document to say something different from what it originally said.⁷⁸ However, Ms. Viggers admitted that often, including in this case, she took instructions from Mr. Swanick, and others in his office, to prepare documents to reflect past events and dated such documents not on the date of preparation, but the date on which she was told the event had occurred.⁷⁹ Moreover, she testified that she was not aware of the *AMLA*⁸⁰ and, thus, an instruction to record the Claimant's ownership of the Enterprise "as of" an earlier date, even if such an instruction was given after the AMLA, would not have necessarily seemed unusual. Therefore her practice of backdating but not REDACTED documents is consistent with the possibility that she included the Claimant's name in the Shareholders Register after the AMLA.

b) The Evidence Suggests that Certain Documents in the Minute Book Have Been Removed and Replaced

(1) The Minute Book Manufacturer Confirmed that the Documents in the Minute Book have Been Removed and Replaced

33. Mr. Robert Bain, a manager at the company responsible for the design of the Minute Book,⁸¹ testified not only that a number of documents had been removed from the Minute Book, but also that some had been replaced. In particular, the Share Transfer Register which is required by the OBCA is missing from the Minute Book,⁸² and the Officer's Register and the Director's Register are not the same as the originals provided by the manufacturer.⁸³ Ms. Viggers' explanation in her witness statement for the Officers' and Directors' Registers was that she probably printed different Registers from a computer program, because they were missing from the Minute Book when she received it from the supplier.⁸⁴ At the hearing, Ms. Viggers changed her testimony as to the source of the Directors' Register and Officers' Register in the Minute Book. She testified that the ones in the Minute Book were simply copies of extra registers that she had around the office.⁸⁵

⁸² Hearing Transcript, Day 1, page 154, line 20 to page 155, line 3 (Mr. Bain). The only explanation provided for the absence of this Register was Ms. Vigger's assertion in her witness statement that it was supposedly too much work to maintain it. This is not a credible explanation for the failure to maintain a statutorily required Register. See Witness Statement of Anna Viggers (January 20, 2011), ¶ 9.

⁸³ Hearing Transcript, Day 1, pages 152, line 2 to 154, line 15 (Mr. Bain).

34. Her claim that the Minute Book must have been missing documents when it was delivered is not credible. At the hearing, Mr. Bain explained that, because of the way the Minute Book was assembled, it is REDACTED that it would have been delivered missing only the Officers' and Directors' registers.⁸⁶

35. The anomalies related to these Registers suggest the possibility that there were, at some point, other directors or officers of the Enterprise that were listed on Registers that have been removed from the Minute Book and replaced. This possibility is reinforced by other evidence at the hearing.

36. First, there are signatures on the Enterprise's REDACTED for both the REDACTED

However, as confirmed by forensic expert Mr. Lindblom, on the basis of his examination of 56 signatures of Mr. Swanick, the signature of the Secretary of the Enterprise on the REDACTED bears nor resemblance to Mr. Swanick's.⁸⁷

37. Second, Mr. Swanick did not behave as the Enterprise's sole officer and director throughout the Enterprise's existence. In particular, he testified that, if he was the director of a corporation that became involved in litigation, he would normally have reviewed the information in its corporate minute book.⁸⁸ The Enterprise was involved in two significant litigations in 2003. However, according to Mr. Swanick, the first time he reviewed the Enterprise's Minute Book, after its incorporation, was when the AMLA was introduced into the Ontario Legislature in April 2004.⁸⁹

38. Finally, Mr. Lindblom's forensic examination of the documents in the Minute Book identified the indentation of an unidentified signature, which was not Mr. Swanick's, [REDACTED]. The alignment and position of this unidentified and unsourced signature overlaps the indentation of the director's signature [REDACTED] [REDACTED]⁹⁰ This suggests that another [REDACTED] was signed by a different individual acting as the Enterprise's Director.

(2) The Forensic Indentation Analysis Suggests Documents in the Minute Book have Been Removed and Replaced

39. Mr. Lindblom explained in his report that he found indentations on documents in the Minute Book which, from their location and alignment, indicate that other documents were once present and signed in the Minute Book, but have since been removed. In particular, the indentations that Mr. Lindblom identified suggest that at one point there was at least one other [REDACTED] that a document may have been removed from the section of the Minute Book containing documents issuing and transferring the share,⁹² and, most importantly, that at one point there was another signed share certificate in the Minute Book.⁹³ These results are inconsistent with the Claimant's earlier assertion that there were no documents missing from the Minute Book.⁹⁴

⁹⁴ Canada's Submission on Jurisdiction, ¶¶ 108-109. Letter from C. Gastle to M. Owen (October 4, 2010) [CDB, Tab 58]

40. To explain these unsourced indentations, Ms. Viggers, in her witness statement,⁹⁵ and Mr. Swanick, in his testimony at the hearing,⁹⁶ claimed that Ms. Viggers would provide Mr. Swanick with the signature pages from many different corporations together, and that these unsourced indentations could have come from signatures on documents of other corporations.

41. However, in her oral testimony, Ms. Viggers confirmed several times that when she provided minute book documents, including share certificates, to Mr. Swanick for signature, she kept the documents for each corporation separate.⁹⁷ The documents on which Mr. Lindblom found unsourced indentations were located in the middle of the Minute Book, and therefore, no document from another corporation would have been on top of any of these documents when signed.

42. When asked how such indentations occurred on documents in the middle of the Minute Book, Ms. Viggers suggested that the unsourced signatures in the Minute Book might be from other documents, such as cheques.⁹⁸ However, this does not account for how, on Mr. Swanick's chaotic and disorganized desk,⁹⁹ those signature indentations were perfectly aligned with the signature lines of the existing documents.¹⁰⁰

43. Finally, the indentations found by Mr. Lindblom suggest that while certain documents were signed while fastened in the Minute Book, others were signed outside of it and inserted later. In particular, the lack of an indentation from the signature on the

was signed.¹⁰¹ Moreover, the fact that the signature on the second page of [REDACTED] is indented, in perfect alignment, onto the divider that follows it suggests that it was later inserted and signed in the Minute Book.¹⁰²

44. Further, the absence of indentations on certain documents in the middle of the Minute Book, including the document [REDACTED],¹⁰³ is consistent with those documents not being in the Minute Book when signed.

45. Finally, the alignment of the indentations on the documents that transfer the share to the Claimant, is also consistent with those documents not being in the Minute Book when Mr. Swanick started signing them, but then, at some point during the signing process, being reordered and added to the Minute Book.¹⁰⁴

46. The dates that the documents described above were removed from, or added to, the Minute Book cannot be determined by the forensic indentation analysis.¹⁰⁵ However, Mr. Swanick's testimony, that after the Minute Book was originally prepared he did not open it again until after the AMLA had been introduced, is consistent with these modifications occurring in 2004.¹⁰⁶

¹⁰¹ Hearing Transcript, Day 3, page 59, line 10 to page 61, line 14 (Mr. Lindblom). See Lindblom Report, pp. 9-10 and Charts 3(a), 4(a), 4(b) and 4(c).

(3) The Forensic Ink Analysis is Consistent With Documents in the Minute Book Having Been Removed and Replaced

47. Mr. Lindblom explained in his report that Mr. Swanick used a total of five different inks to sign the documents in the Minute Book.¹⁰⁷ At the hearing, Mr. Lindblom confirmed that it is highly unusual for documents to be signed at the same time with so many different inks.¹⁰⁸ These results are therefore consistent with the documents now found in the Minute Book being prepared and signed at different times.

48. Mr. Swanick – and Ms. Viggers – attempted to explain away the number of inks on these documents by claiming that Mr. Swanick normally had five or six different pens out on his desk and that he was often interrupted when signing documents.¹⁰⁹ However, if Mr. Swanick’s testimony is believed, he was presented with all of the organizational documents at one time, and even though he gave these documents only a cursory review,¹¹⁰ he must have been interrupted at least nine times during the signing process and picked up a different pen after each interruption.¹¹¹ The more logical conclusion is that the Minute Book includes documents that have replaced others and were added at some other date, possibly after the AMLA.

B. The Claimant Did Not Act As the Owner of the Enterprise

49. The lack of reliable contemporaneous documentary evidence mentioning the Claimant’s involvement with Adams Mine is inconsistent with his claim that he was the owner of the Enterprise, as is his behaviour prior to the introduction of the AMLA. At no time did the Claimant act like he was the owner of the Enterprise. He made no contribution to the Enterprise. He did not hold himself out as the owner of the Enterprise to management, his friends, his family or even the tax authorities. He was even disinterested in the most basic issues that would concern an owner, namely, the risks and rewards of ownership.

¹⁰⁷ Lindblom Report, pp. 12-15. The ink on document 9 was distinguished using a Video Spectral Comparator. The other seven inks were identified using a Thin Layer Chromatography test. Mr. Swanick would have to have been interrupted nine times in light of the number and order of the organizational documents found in the Lindblom Report (see Lindblom Report, documents listed under D2, D3 and D6 in Appendix 2, combined with the ink analysis on page 14 and 15 of this report).

1. The Claimant Made No Economic or Other Contribution to the Enterprise

50. The Claimant contributed nothing to the Enterprise. He admitted that he did not contribute any capital to the Enterprise, either initially to fund the purchase of the Adams Mine Site by the Enterprise,¹¹² or at any point thereafter.¹¹³ Further, as shown below, the testimony revealed that the Claimant also put no time or effort into the managing or even understanding the operations of the business he allegedly owned.

51. The only source of REDACTED for the Enterprise was REDACTED¹¹⁴. However, the Claimant never knew and never cared to find out who the Limited Partners were (other than Mr. Cortellucci),¹¹⁵ did not know that the individual Limited Partners had REDACTED¹¹⁶ and had never seen the Limited Partnership Agreement,¹¹⁷ despite the fact the Enterprise was the general partner of the Limited Partnership.¹¹⁸ Further, while the Limited Partners allegedly

The Enterprise as the general partner of the Limited Partnership would also have unlimited liability for the actions of the Limited Partnership when it managed the site. However, the Claimant did not seem to have any understanding of this critical fact, instead testifying that Limited Partners are called REDACTED

REDACTE Hearing Transcript, Day 1, page 268, lines 7-10 (Mr. Gallo).

REDACTED the Enterprise only pursuant to an alleged Loan Agreement,¹¹⁹ the Claimant did not know when the Loan Agreement was signed,¹²⁰ did not know the interest rate on the loan,¹²¹ and never saw the actual Loan Agreement.¹²²

52. The Claimant also admitted that he was unfamiliar with the Enterprise's purported management arrangements. In particular, the Claimant testified at the hearing that he did not know that the REDACTED the Enterprise.¹²³ He believed that the only person retained to manage the Site was Mr. McGuinty.¹²⁴

53. According to the Claimant, his ignorance of these basic matters stems from the fact that his role in the Enterprise was to raise money for the development of the Adams Mine,¹²⁵ and that he left management to his alleged agent, Mr. Cortellucci.¹²⁶ However, Mr. Cortellucci testified that he was not managing the Enterprise, and that he was leaving all of the decisions to the Claimant.¹²⁷

54. Moreover, the testimony revealed that the Claimant was also not making any efforts to raise money for the Enterprise. The Claimant not only failed to recall the venture capitalists and individuals in the Pennsylvania waste industry that he allegedly contacted,¹²⁸ but the two friends he did speak with, Mr. Noto and Mr. Belardi, both affirmed his inactivity.

55. Mr. Noto testified that the Claimant never provided him with a single document with respect to the Adams Mine,¹²⁹ that the Claimant provided him with no details about the size or permitted capacity of the Adams Mine (details crucial to any potential investor),¹³⁰ and that, indeed, the Claimant never even mentioned the name of the site to him.¹³¹ Mr. Noto also admitted that his “REDACTED” with his contacts about this unidentified site were limited to no more than updates to say that he had no other information.¹³²

56. Similarly, there is no credible evidence that the Claimant discussed fundraising with Mr. Belardi. At the hearing, Mr. Belardi testified that “REDACTED”, the owner of the “REDACTED”, was excited about the project and “REDACTED”.¹³³ However, this is inconsistent with his own witness statement, where he was explicit that he never even mentioned the Adams Mine to “REDACTED”.¹³⁴ It was also inconsistent with most of his other testimony at the hearing. For example, he testified that he never got a “REDACTED” from the Claimant that he could use to approach “REDACTED”,¹³⁵ that there was never a deal “REDACTED”,¹³⁶ and that “REDACTED” had shifted his focus to a casino project by 2004.¹³⁷ Furthermore, Mr. Belardi testified that it would be “REDACTED” for an investor to acquire a former mine without doing environmental due diligence.¹³⁸ Yet, there is no evidence that he had ever begun any due diligence on behalf of his client.

57. The Claimant's failure to make any effort to raise funds for the development of Adams Mine into a waste disposal site is not surprising in light of documents confirming that Mr. McGuinty was trying to sell the Adams Mine undeveloped.¹³⁹ Documents also confirm that Mr. Cortellucci was trying to sell the Site and that he had retained Mr.

REDACT to assist him in doing so.¹⁴⁰ In fact, Mr. Cortellucci also confirmed that the Limited Partners had not committed REDACT to take even the initial steps to develop the Site,¹⁴¹ and that they did not intend to do so.¹⁴²

58. Selling Adams Mine undeveloped made perfect sense as a business strategy for Mr. Cortellucci. He was a successful multi-millionaire businessman with nearly 40 years of experience purchasing and developing land in Ontario.¹⁴³ He also had political connections as he was one of the largest donors to the political party in power in the provincial government in 2002.¹⁴⁴ In short, he had the experience purchasing, promoting and selling land; he had the financial resources to purchase and market the Site; and he

At the hearing, Mr. Cortellucci testified that Mr. McGuinty was making such efforts because it was in his financial interest to see the Site sold. Hearing Transcript, Day 4, page 237, line 7-20 (Mr. Cortellucci). The only reason why Mr. McGuinty would want a sale was if the Enterprise never planned to develop Adams Mine, since he could only collect the royalties due to Notre if the site was built and operating. had the political connections to effectively lobby provincial and municipal officials to endorse or even purchase the Site.

2. The Claimant Did Not Hold Himself Out as the Owner of the Enterprise

a) The Claimant Did Not Hold Himself Out as the Owner of the Enterprise to the Enterprise's Own Manager

59. The Claimant admitted that he has never spoken to Mr. McGuinty, the managing director of the Enterprise:¹⁴⁵ not prior to allegedly instructing that Mr. McGuinty be retained on an unconditional five year, million dollar contract; not at any time during the attempts to acquire the permits still required by the Enterprise; not about the efforts to obtain the required lands surrounding the Adams Mine; and not about any of Mr. McGuinty's efforts to sell the Site.

60. The explanations that the Claimant has offered for this lack of communication have varied considerably over the course of this arbitration. He testified in his witness statements that he kept his involvement secret because he was worried that Mr. McGuinty might raise the purchase price if he knew of the Claimant's involvement and that his involvement in the project could embarrass the Pennsylvania's Governor's office.¹⁴⁶ Yet, as the Claimant admitted at the hearing, he also did not speak to Mr. McGuinty after the transaction had closed, or after he had left government.¹⁴⁷

61. The Claimant also testified that there was no need for him to speak to Mr. McGuinty prior to retaining him because he was confident in Mr. McGuinty's ability to run the business.¹⁴⁸ Given that the Claimant never met Mr. McGuinty, his only source of confidence about Mr. McGuinty's abilities was Mr. Cortellucci.¹⁴⁹ However, the Claimant had only just met Mr. Cortellucci,¹⁵⁰ and one of the only things that he knew about him was that Mr. Cortellucci had no experience in the waste disposal industry.¹⁵¹ Consequently, there would have been no justifiable reason for the Claimant to trust Mr. Cortellucci's ability to assess the qualifications of a manager of a waste management project.

62. The Claimant then testified that he kept his identity secret from Mr. McGuinty because his new employer, Lehigh University, had a policy prohibiting outside employment.¹⁵² However, he failed to submit any evidence to support this testimony despite the fact that this policy is publicly available.¹⁵³

63. The Claimant also testified that he was not willing to disclose his identity to Mr. McGuinty because he was concerned that Mr. McGuinty would disclose it to the press and that he would have to endure the resulting public relations issues associated with ownership of a controversial waste disposal site.¹⁵⁴ Keeping the Claimant's identity from Mr. McGuinty, however, forced Mr. Cortellucci to deal with these issues.¹⁵⁵ It is not credible that Mr. Cortellucci, an Ontario residential developer, would willingly be associated with a waste disposal site – with the attendant public relations issues – so that a resident of Pennsylvania, with no business or other interests in Ontario, could avoid such issues. In fact, it was Mr. Cortellucci himself who explained that residential developers do not want their names associated with waste disposal sites.¹⁵⁶

¹⁵⁰ They had spoken once at a social event and only a couple of times on the phone before Mr. Cortellucci agreed to Mr. McGuinty's terms and conditions in the Agreement of Purchase and Sale that Mr. Cortellucci signed in May 2002. b) The Claimant Did Not Hold Himself Out as the Owner of the Enterprise to His Cousin Who was an Investor in the Enterprise

64. For the first time at the hearing, the Claimant acknowledged that he is a cousin of Mr. Saverio Montemarano.¹⁵⁷ Mr. Montemarano is one of Mr. Cortellucci's oldest business associates and his partner in numerous ventures¹⁵⁸— including the Limited Partnership that [REDACTED] the Enterprise.¹⁵⁹ According to the bank records of the Enterprise, [REDACTED], [REDACTED].¹⁶⁰

65. The Claimant testified that he traveled to Toronto in late September 2002.¹⁶¹ During this trip, he visited the CN Tower with his cousin, Mr. Montemarano.¹⁶² On this same trip, the Claimant allegedly visited Mr. Cortellucci to review the status of Adams Mine.¹⁶³ Yet, the Claimant testified that he did not know Mr. Montemarano was a Limited Partner in the project.¹⁶⁴ This means that, when they were together, two weeks after Mr. Montemarano had made his [REDACTED], ten days after the Enterprise acquired title to Adams Mine, and within days of the Claimant's alleged visit to review the status of the project, they never discussed the business in which they were allegedly both involved.

c) The Claimant Did Not Hold Himself Out as the Owner of the Enterprise to Friends Who Were Involved with the Project

66. In his opening statement, the Claimant pointed to the testimony of three allegedly independent witnesses – Mr. Wolf, Mr. Noto and Mr. Belardi – as evidence that he was the owner of the Enterprise prior to the introduction of the AMLA.¹⁶⁵ All three individuals are his friends,¹⁶⁶ and yet, far from supporting the Claimant’s allegations, both Mr. Wolf and Mr. Noto testified at that hearing that the Claimant had never once told them that he was the owner of the Adams Mine.

67. Mr. Wolf has been the Claimant’s friend for nearly twenty years.¹⁶⁷ According to Mr. Wolf, he discussed the Claimant’s possible involvement in the waste management industry in Canada with the Claimant prior to 2003,¹⁶⁸ and according to the Claimant, it was in part because of Mr. Wolf’s advice that he got involved with the project.¹⁶⁹ Mr. Wolf also testified that the Claimant and he still see each other frequently because of their respective jobs.¹⁷⁰ Not once in the nearly 10 years since he allegedly acquired it, however, did the Claimant ever mention to his friend and advisor that he was the owner of Adams Mine.¹⁷¹

68. Similarly, Mr. Noto has been the Claimant’s friend for over a decade.¹⁷² In fact, Mr. Noto was the former business partner of the Claimant and his wife immediately after Mr. Noto left government employment in 2004.¹⁷³ Further, Mr. Noto testified that between 2002 and 2004 he discussed with the Claimant opportunities in the waste management industry¹⁷⁴ and that he was in contact with the REDACTED on behalf of the Claimant, with respect to their possibly becoming involved in an Ontario waste disposal project.¹⁷⁵ Despite this, Mr. Noto admitted that he could not recall a single instance when the Claimant told him that he was the owner of Adams Mine.¹⁷⁶

69. The only witness who testified that Mr. Gallo actually said he owned the Adams Mine was Mr. Belardi. However, Mr. Belardi's testimony is not credible. His testimony was both internally inconsistent, and contradicted by the testimony of the Claimant and Mr. Cortellucci.

70. Mr. Belardi testified that the Claimant sought his advice about whether to purchase the Adams Mine¹⁷⁷ and sent him a draft purchase agreement to review.¹⁷⁸ However, Mr. Belardi never mentioned this conversation in his direct examination, or in his witness statement, where he was explicit that the Claimant only spoke to him before the Claimant had supposedly identified a site and then after Adams Mine had been purchased.¹⁷⁹

71. Nor did Mr. Belardi mention in his witness statement that he received a draft purchase agreement.¹⁸⁰ Further, he did not know the names Mario Cortellucci and Gordon McGuinty¹⁸¹ even though the parties to the Agreement of Purchase and Sale include the Cortellucci Group of Companies ("Cortellucci Group") and Mr. McGuinty. Mr. Belardi's testimony in this regard was further discredited when Mr. Cortellucci confirmed that he never sent the Claimant a draft agreement.¹⁸²

d) The Claimant Did Not Claim to be the Owner of the Enterprise on His U.S. Income Tax Returns

72. As explained in Canada's previous submissions, if the Claimant was the sole shareholder of the Enterprise, he had an obligation to make certain filings with the U.S. tax authorities.¹⁸³ It is undisputed that he made no filings until 2008, and in fact, there is still no evidence in the record that he has made all the required filings.¹⁸⁴

73. The Claimant's explanation that it never crossed his mind that, as a U.S. resident, he might have to inform U.S. tax authorities that he was the sole shareholder of a corporation that held an asset supposedly worth tens, if not hundreds, of millions of dollars, is not credible. Despite confirming that he had an accountant prepare his U.S. tax returns,¹⁸⁵ the Claimant admitted that he did not believe that he mentioned his ownership of the Enterprise to this accountant,¹⁸⁶ and that he did not consult any U.S. tax advisors about any tax implications or reporting obligations related to his ownership of the Enterprise.¹⁸⁷ According to the Claimant, the only person he spoke to concerning any U.S. tax obligations was Mr. Swanick, whom he knew was not qualified to give him such advice.¹⁸⁸ Moreover, at the hearing, the Claimant confirmed, several times, that the first time that he received U.S. tax advice from Mr. Swanick was in 2008 – long after both the AMLA and the initiation of this arbitration.¹⁸⁹

3. The Claimant Was Uninformed of, and Showed No Interest in, the Risks or Rewards of Ownership of the Enterprise

a) The Claimant Did Not Do, Request or Review, Any Due Diligence on the Title to the Site

74. The Claimant has alleged that he is the owner of an Enterprise which came with millions of dollars of liabilities and only one asset: title to Adams Mine.¹⁹⁰ As such, one would expect the Claimant to have been interested in ensuring that the title that was acquired was good and valid. Yet, the Claimant has admitted that not only was the due diligence report on the title never sent to him, he did not even know such a report had been done.¹⁹¹ Nor does he appear to have been aware that Canadian Waste Services Inc. (“CWS”)¹⁹² held a right of first refusal on the Site.¹⁹³

75. His remarkable disinterest in the quality of the title persisted even when that title was challenged in a lawsuit filed by CWS in February 2003. If the lawsuit was successful, the Claimant’s alleged investment would be worthless. Yet, the Claimant admitted he was unaware of the details of the case¹⁹⁴ and never once requested or received a report from the counsel that Mr. Cortellucci retained to defend the action.¹⁹⁵

b) The Claimant Did Not Do, Request, or Review, Any Environmental Due Diligence on Adams Mine

76. According to Mr. Belardi, who testified that he had an extensive background in the waste management business, any potential owner does environmental due diligence prior to purchasing a waste management site.¹⁹⁶ Indeed, Mr. Belardi explained that the potential environmental liabilities associated with old industrial activities are so large that they can financially bury an investor.¹⁹⁷

77. The Claimant never did any environmental due diligence on Adams Mine. He did not travel to Adams Mine even once,¹⁹⁸ and he did not retain experts – no engineers or environmental consultants – to do any due diligence on his behalf.¹⁹⁹ According to the Claimant, he relied on the Provisional Certificate of Approval issued for the Site – which he testified was the [REDACTED],²⁰⁰ However, the Claimant admitted that he had never seen the Provisional Certificate of Approval for the Adams Mine Site,²⁰¹ let alone asked an engineer or anyone to review it on his behalf.²⁰²

c) The Claimant Did Not Do, Request, or Review, Any Business Due Diligence

78. The Claimant testified that the Enterprise intended to develop and then operate Adams Mine as a waste disposal facility.²⁰³ However, the Claimant never did any due diligence as to whether Adams Mine could be developed, how much this would cost or whether it could be operated profitably.²⁰⁴

79. Indeed, as Canada has previously explained, there is no documentary evidence that the Claimant received any information on Adams Mine prior to the signing of the

Agreement of Purchase and Sale.²⁰⁵ It is not credible that an investor would become involved in a business, especially one that he knew was controversial and unpopular,²⁰⁶ without reviewing detailed information.

80. Perhaps recognizing this, the Claimant alleged, for the first time at the hearing, that a presentation had, in fact, been mailed to him by Mr. Cortellucci. Neither the Claimant nor Mr. Cortellucci could explain why they had failed to mention this fact in their witness statements.²⁰⁷ Moreover, the Claimant's evidence about receiving this document was inconsistent. He initially stated that he did not keep a copy of the document,²⁰⁸ then later stated that he did, but had subsequently lost it.²⁰⁹ He also claimed that he forwarded the presentation to Mr. Belardi (although he did not mention forwarding it to Mr. Noto who was also allegedly in contact with potential investors), but Mr. Belardi had no recollection of receiving it.²¹⁰ Finally, the Claimant testified that he had never heard of CWS²¹¹ even though the presentation that he claims to have received and reviewed refers to CWS five times. In particular, the presentation compared Notre's offer to Mr. Cortellucci with the option that CWS had to purchase the Site as part of the Rail Cycle North consortium, indicated that CWS was a potential market competitor and indicated that CWS had a right of first refusal on Adams Mine.²¹²

81. Moreover, even if the Claimant's testimony that he received the presentation is to be believed, it is not credible that the presentation is all that he would have wanted to review if he was the owner of the Enterprise. While the Claimant first alleged that the presentation was REDACTED,²¹³ it is, in fact, a short Powerpoint presentation that describes the project only in general terms. It does not include detailed engineering designs, cost estimates, market analyses, or a strategic development plan. Such detailed documents do exist, and were in fact provided to Mr. Cortellucci at the same time as the presentation in question.²¹⁴ However, the Claimant never asked to see such information, and Mr. Cortellucci never sent it to him.²¹⁵

82. Finally, the evidence revealed that the Claimant never did any market due diligence with respect to the Ontario waste industry.²¹⁶ While he testified that he had done such due diligence,²¹⁷ and that he had in fact corresponded with an office in Ontario that was under the supervision of Mr. Wolf in this regard,²¹⁸ Mr. Wolf testified that the Claimant never made such contact with his office.²¹⁹ Further, as noted above, the Claimant admitted that he was unfamiliar with the company, CWS,²²⁰ the largest waste management company in Ontario. Any potential owner of a waste disposal company in Ontario who did even a little market due diligence would inevitably identify CWS as a primary competitor.

f) The Claimant Was Unaware of His Potential Return on Successful Sale of the Site

87. An investor invests to make money, and as a result, should have an interest in the returns that his investment will generate. All of the Claimant's witnesses testified that the Claimant's share of the profits from the operation or sale of Adams Mine would be REDACTED.²⁴⁰ The Claimant has alleged that his plan was to trade away part of this share to raise the significant funds needed to develop the Site.²⁴¹ However, if the Site could be sold prior to development, then there would be no need to raise such funds and the Claimant would receive a massive payout even though he did nothing. Accordingly, one would expect that the Claimant would have been particularly interested in any efforts to sell the Site prior to development, and in particular, in the price sought.

88. The evidence shows that Mr. Cortellucci was trying to sell the Site.²⁴² He signed a contract, on behalf of the Enterprise and the Limited Partnership, retaining REDACTED REDACTED to sell the Site for $30 million or more, plus an annual royalty. The Claimant was unaware of any of the details of this contract with REDACTED²⁴³ and had never seen it before.²⁴⁴ The Claimant also stated that Mr. Cortellucci never discussed with him either the sale price, or the royalty amounts, that were the basis of REDACTED efforts.²⁴⁵

C. Mr. Cortellucci and the Limited Partners Acted as if They Owned the Enterprise

90. The Claimant was not the only one whose actions are inconsistent with his ownership of the Enterprise. It was Mr. Cortellucci who assumed all the risk of purchasing Adams Mine. He then formed the Limited Partnership to share that risk with the other Limited Partners. The Limited Partners [REDACTED] to the Enterprise and controlled it through Mr. Cortellucci. On its regulatory filings, the Enterprise held itself out as owned by Canadian residents. Finally, the Limited Partnership [REDACTED] the Enterprise in a manner consistent with the Limited Partners owning the Enterprise.

1. Mr. Cortellucci Assumed all the Risk of Purchasing Adams Mine

91. Mr. Cortellucci, and his company, the Cortellucci Group, incurred all of the risk of entering the Agreement of Purchase and Sale with Notre to purchase Adams Mine.²⁴⁷ It was the Cortellucci Group that was obliged by that Agreement to take on $3.25 million in unconditional payment obligations.²⁴⁸ The Cortellucci Group also knowingly assumed the risk of a lawsuit by CWS over Notre's failure to provide a right of first refusal to purchase the Site.²⁴⁹

92. Mr. Cortellucci testified that he was unconcerned with assuming such risks because the Cortellucci Group allegedly purchased the Adams Mine "in trust" for the Claimant.²⁵⁰ The evidence on the record is not clear that this purchase was, in fact, in trust. The words "in trust" were added by hand and were not initialed by Mr. McGuinty.²⁵¹ While Mr. Swanick testified that Mr. McGuinty was present when the Agreement was signed and this change was made,²⁵² Mr. Cortellucci testified that Mr. McGuinty was not.²⁵³

93. Moreover, even if Mr. Cortellucci's company did purchase Adams Mine "in trust", this would not excuse the Cortellucci Group from the obligation to pay the $3.25 million pursuant to the Agreement of Purchase and Sale, or from the potential liability arising from a lawsuit brought by CWS. However, Mr. Cortellucci admitted that he agreed to these risks without any security or guarantee from the Claimant.²⁵⁴ He testified that he was willing to do so without security because he trusted the Claimant²⁵⁵ and believed the Claimant was an expert in the waste management business.²⁵⁶ However, the reality is that Mr. Cortellucci barely knew the Claimant, having only met him once at a

In his testimony, Mr. Cortellucci also suggested that he was unconcerned about the risks because the Claimant's alleged U.S. investors could have covered the millions of dollars of losses if they materialized.²⁵⁹ However, Mr. Cortellucci did not know who these potential investors were, let alone have any reason to believe that they would cover any losses when they had no legal obligation to do so.²⁶⁰

110. Second, the alleged Management Agreement REDACTED REDACTED and accordingly, could not have come into existence before the alleged Loan Agreement did. However, as shown above, the evidence is not consistent with the existence of the alleged Loan Agreement prior to the introduction of the AMLA.

111. Third, documents show that it was the Enterprise – not the Limited Partnership acting as the REDACTED

112. Further, the evidence also indicates that Mr. McGuinty was retained by the Enterprise, not the Limited Partnership. In Mr. McGuinty's witness statement, he quotes from a section of his retainer agreement that confirms that it was the Enterprise which retained him.³¹⁹ This is consistent with a letter sent by Mr. Swanick to Mr. McGuinty that also confirms that it is the Enterprise that retained Mr. McGuinty.³²⁰ The Claimant attempted to explain both Mr. McGuinty's testimony and the letter sent by Mr. Swanick as errors.³²¹ The only document he could offer in support of his claim that it was the Limited Partnership that retained Mr. McGuinty is an agreement that Mr. McGuinty never even signed.³²² This is not credible evidence, especially in light of Mr. McGuinty's testimony. The Limited Partnership recorded the REDACTED

113. Finally, when Mr. Cortellucci retained REDACTED to assist in the sale of the Site, he executed the agreement for both the Enterprise and the Limited Partnership, even though he had no authority to do so.³²⁴ On its face, the terms of the Agreement with IRE REDACTE contemplate the Limited Partnership earning all of the revenue associated with the sale of the Adams Mine and being entitled to the whole royalty that any new owner might agree to pay.³²⁵ These terms are, thus, inconsistent with REDACTED

114. Accordingly, there is no insufficient evidence supporting the Claimant's assertion that the Limited Partnership REDA CTED and controlled the Enterprise pursuant to arms-length contracts that made it the REDACTED. Rather, the evidence is consistent with the Limited Partnership funding and controlling the Enterprise as its owner.
